The importance of good timing

By WILLIAM L. TRIMYER

The Importance of Timing
Lesson for September 20, 1981
Bible Study Passage: Ecclesiastes 3:1-15

INTRODUCTION

The human drama is varied and spacious. The third chapter of Ecclesiastes invites us to consider the significance of timing and management of life. It has to do with setting priorities and making room for life's unexpectancies.

The "time to" passages urge us to wisdom in the timing of our undertakings and when to seize upon an opportunity; they stir us to pry open new doors and when to conclude that certain doors will likely remain closed, that there is nothing to do but wait or knock elsewhere.

Some see Ecclesiastes as the confession of a fatalist who sees life as a rigid, patterned system from which there is no escape. Another way of looking at what these Bible messages are saying is to see them as things done or left undone. Maybe we have made war when we should have made love; we may have wounded when we should have sought to heal; perhaps we have participated in breaking down when we should have built up.

The good news of the Ecclesiastical writer is that God is involved in the human drama, "that he hath made every thing beautiful in his time."

LIFE'S GIVENS [Ecc. 3:1-8]

The pursuit of happiness is an uphill struggle at times. We do seem to spin our wheels and search in vain for happiness and contentment. There are bends in our journey where we encounter disappointment and frustration, but our faith says to us, "Go on, plod ahead, for not all is dark or hopeless."

Of course, certain things happen in life over which we have little or no control. Our hands are tied when it comes to choosing birth or facing certain losses. But life is not a fatalistic trip down a dark highway with no markings or signs. Life has built-in variety that was set in motion when God initiated his creative activity.

While certain things are built into the human pilgrimage, this does not mean we have no options or freedom to choose. We can exercise our options and choose in our favor.

FACING THE DOUBTS [Ecc. 3:9-10]

The writer did not have all the answers to the vainities he saw in life. He lived with limitations and unanswered questions for which he seemingly found no peace of mind. But he was an honest person who was willing to risk his doubts and search for answers. The person who willfully risks his or her doubts is open to growth and futher understanding. To hide from our doubts or to pretend they do not exist can only deepen our confusion. The puzzle of life is pieced together bit by bit. We never get the total picture all at once, and this is where we exercise our option of faith.

There is a tendency in us to throw up our hands and cry with the writer of Ecclesiastes, "What's the use? Why go on?" Our hope comes in the faith that God is and continues to be involved in the human drama.

CELEBRATING LIFE [Ecc. 3:11-25]

Life is a gift from God that is meant to be celebrated in an attitude of praise and thanksgiving. God's timely creation provides his children with all essential needs and then some. Everything God created is good and for the good of his people.

The fatalistic echoes in this passage seem to suggest that life is at its best when we are eating, drinking and being merry with the fruits of our labors. When Christ came he wiped away the notion of pursuing a materialistic lifestyle. He said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

The writer of Ecclesiastes was without the revelation of Christ. He was not fully aware that life was more than meat and potatoes. But when Christ came, he introduced his followers to a way of life that involved service and praise.
